

THE United States Senate is going to expel Senator Burton. Why should Senator Burton be expelled as long as Chauncey M. Depew is tolerated as a member of that body?

EVERY day it becomes more evident that William Jennings Bryan will be the Democratic standard bearer in 1908. If he is, there will be no Republican majority in Missouri that year. No, not by a long ways.

THE Potosi Journal makes pretensions to fairness and honesty. Then why should it quote the Post-Dispatch as a Democratic paper? The editor of the Journal knows that the Post-Dispatch is not a Democratic paper, and such misrepresentation is little short of contemptible.

WE want some Republican paper in Southeast Missouri (the De Soto Republican, Farmington News or Poplar Bluff Republican preferred) to tell us why Congress has passed a law taking the tariff off of alcohol? As the foreigner pays the tariff why should the American people care how high the import duty is on alcohol? We pause for an answer.

SENATOR TILLMAN of South Carolina, a few days ago, introduced a resolution instructing the District of Columbia committee to investigate the connection of the police with the ejection of Mrs. Morris and to ascertain whether the superintendent of police undertook to make an investigation "concerning the previous life and reputation of Mrs. Morris, and especially to inquire whether the superintendent of police and one of the chief witnesses against Mrs. Morris have since then received recognition by the appointment of near relatives to office, and whether any laws should be adopted by Congress for the better regulation and improvement of the police force of the city of Washington." The Washington correspondent of the New York World says: "The appointment referred to are those of a son of Richard Sylvester, superintendent of police, and the son of a newspaper correspondent, who was the only eye-witness giving testimony favorable to Mr. Barnes who were appointed cadets to the military academy at West Point. It said these appointments were made February 7."—The Commoner.

ACCORDING to the Post-Dispatch, "the increase in insanity in New York since 1890 is not less than 25 per cent. Dr. Wm. B. Pritchard, Consulting Neurologist at Smith Institute" (how awe-compelling this learned designation!) "attributes the increase to 'sensationalism in reform propaganda. These,' he says, 'have been Bryanism, socialism, and other insane doctrines.'" Of course the maddening greed for unearned wealth which has debauched all the "business interests"—the frenzied finance which has created thousands of subjects fit for the penitentiary—the soulless manipulations of Wall street, that pre-eminent defender of the national honor, which have despoiled and ruined innumerable honest and innocent victims—of course none of these is conducive to a mind distraught! But be the causes whatsoever they are, there is comfort in the thought that come what may of public and social turmoil, be the surrounding conditions what they will—though all the earth be turned into one vast Bedlam—Dr. Wm. B. Pritchard, neurologist at Smith Institute, may rest secure: In all the neurological annals of five thousand years, from those inscribed in the Sanscrit character clear down to the illustrated Sunday Padder, there is not of record one case of an ass's going insane.

Rev. Jerome C. Berryman.

On the 8th day of this month, at Caledonia, passed from earth one whose name has been a household word in Southeast Missouri for nearly three-quarters of a century, and whose worth and genius are indelibly stamped upon its history.—REV. JEROME C. BERRYMAN. While I recognize that the setting out of his life-work is a task beyond me, yet an acquaintance of fifty years warrants my attempt at rendering tribute to his memory. I first met him in 1856, as a pupil at the Arcadia Seminary, and even then to my boyish eyes he was an old man. Not that his step was feeble or his voice uncertain, for his stalwart frame and rugged countenance showed the full vigor of manhood; but the grizzled hair and care-furrowed brow betokened a life of labor and firm-set purpose. We looked upon him with reverence and somewhat of awe, yet he was genial and kindly: possessed at times of a quiet humor which attracted us but lessened not our deep respect. He was a strict disciplinarian but not a martinet, and of the host who sat at his feet during all the years of the Arcadia High School, not one went forth from its portals into the great world beyond but bore with him a love for the master. For myself, I cannot recall the scenes and events of those days of old with unperturbed feeling—the once loved comrades and the voices stilled forever—and always foremost in the vanished ranks stands the form of him who at last has joined the ever increasing majority. He has cast from him the grievous burden of extreme old age, and is now possessed of all the blessings there are to recompense the ills of earth and to reward the meed of duty done. He now knows the truth of the faith that sustained him through life and led him ever onward and upward. His body that reposes in the quiet, greenwood cemetery at Caledonia, is not the J. C. Berryman that we have known; it is not the man who wrought for good for more than four-score years, but only Nature's refuse. The mysterious spark that illumined the dull clay is not quenched, nor can it be, so long as the example and precepts of him it animated dwell in the minds of men. I speak of it in its earthly sense; and in this sense it must assuage the grief of those who mourn because the eye sees not the late familiar form, and because the accents of the well-loved voice are hushed to the ear forever.

The following brief sketch of the subject of this memorial, written by one more fully conversant than I with his whole life and work, I copy from the Farmington Times: "Father Berryman was born near Beardsboro, Ky., February 22, 1810, being a descendant of an old English family which for many years found a home in Virginia, moving thence to Ohio county, Kentucky. Before he was grown he came to Missouri, connected himself with the Methodist Church, and in 1828, in his nineteenth year, received license to preach. He was appointed as an itinerant preacher to the St. Francois and Saline circuit. Some idea of the extent of the Missouri Conference in those early days may be gained from the statement that his second appointment, received at Potosi in 1829, took him to Hot Springs and Mount Prairie circuit, most of which lay in Southern Arkansas.

In the fall of 1833, the conference which met at Cain Hill, Ark., assigned him to missionary work among the Indians, at which time the various Indian tribes inhabited all the vast region west of Missouri; Kansas, Nebraska, and the great plains beyond had scarcely ever been penetrated by the whites. Mr. Berryman's appointment, as stated in a memorandum by himself, was to the Kickapoos, but his labors extended to the Shawnees, Pawnees and other tribes, situated in the neighborhood of Fort Leavenworth, on the Missouri. Here he remained eight years, at the end of which time he was appointed superintendent of a manual training school, which the Methodist Church desired to establish, in the hope of civilizing the Indians. The school was located about three miles from the present town of Westport, Mo. The attendance was large, from 200 to 300 at every session. Long afterwards, when on a visit to Indian Territory, Mr. Berryman met grown Indian men and women who had been pupils in his school. His experience while at the mission would fill a volume; and it was there that one of the greatest sorrows of his life overtook him. His faithful wife, who was just recovering from an illness, was taking a horseback ride, and when passing an Indian camp a pack of savage dogs ran out and frightened her pony so that it ran away and threw her off, striking her head against a fence stake. She was carried unconscious to the mission and died in about three weeks.

"This terrible accident and the necessity of giving his motherless children a better training than they could receive on the mission determined Mr. Berryman to return to Missouri, and in 1847, at his own request, he was transferred and placed in charge of the Cape Girardeau district. While at work there he purchased a large tract of land in the Arcadia Valley, where he afterwards established the Arcadia High School, employing teachers, instituting a regular curriculum of studies and issuing diplomas to its graduates. The school became the alma mater of many of the professional and business men of this section. It was successful from the start, was patronized from far and near, and 200 to 300 pupils gathered annually under its roof. In 1858 he disposed of the property to his principal, Prof. A. C. Farnham. The war coming on the school was broken up, and for a time the property was utilized by the government in housing Union refugees from Southeast Missouri and Arkansas, but by special permission of Gen. C. B. Fisk, Mr. Berryman regained possession of the property and the school was re-opened and continued under his management until 1867, when he again disposed of it and permanently retired from educational work.

"He remained in the active work of the ministry until 1883, when, at his own request, he was placed on the 'superannuated list.' For four or five years before his death he was blind, but walked in that faith which had sustained him through the many trials of his life, awaiting the call of the Master whom he had so faithfully served, when his sightless eyes should behold the glorious vision of the Eternal City.

"Father Berryman had been married three times, his second wife being a sister of the late Rev. S. W. Watts, and his third wife a sister of the late Mrs. M. P. Cayce, Sr., of this place. He leaves a daughter, Mrs. E. G. Russell of Farmington, a son, J. W. Berryman of St. Louis, and a number of grandchildren and other relatives."

Miss Elsie McGlothlin.

Miss Elsie Elbertha McGlothlin, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse McGlothlin, was born at Annapolis, Mo., May 7, 1889, and passed peacefully to her eternal reward on Thursday, May 24, 1906, aged 17 years and 17 days, and on Friday afternoon we laid her body to rest in the cemetery at Annapolis. Rev. W. A. Humphreys of De Soto conducting the funeral service.

Elsie was a devoted Christian girl, having been reared in a Christian home and receiving Christian instruction therein, she at the age of fourteen years surrendered her life to the Saviour and united with the M. E. Church, South, the church of her choice, and to which she was loyal until the end. She loved her Saviour, and during her intense suffering she was resigned and her conversation was almost entirely up on the future joy and peace that awaited her. Elsie was a sufferer from consumption, but patient through the days of suffering. She was the only child left in the home, a sister and two brothers being married and living elsewhere. Now the parents are left alone, yet not alone; for has not our Saviour promised to be with us always?

The family has the sympathy of the entire community in this great sorrow. May the Father of all sustain them. A FRIEND.

The drouth in this locality yet continues, while it is reported that heavy rains fell on East Fork last week. To-day the wind is from the north, and the prospects for rain are very poor, indeed. However, it is to be hoped that within the next few days we may have plenty of rain.

Mrs. J. C. Russell and son, who left here some time ago for California, have not yet returned. I am informed that they will probably spend the summer in California.

Dr. J. Q. Adams has returned home after several days' outing.

Miss Emma Hawkins has been spending a few weeks visiting her brother in Ironton.

Mr. Price, who came here from Illinois less than two years ago, will probably rent his farm here and return to Illinois about the first of September. Sorry to have you leave us, Mr. Price.

Burt Harrah recently spent a few days visiting his parents in town.

Rev. Hill filled his regular appointment at the First Baptist church Sunday.

A gentleman from Illinois was out in the west end of Iron county last week with a view of buying a farm. While he did not appear to like this country very well, he said that, owing to the very low price of land here as compared with land in Illinois, he would very probably purchase a farm in Iron county. "The stock law in Illinois," he said, "makes it very hard for the farmer of moderate means to live." He left on the afternoon train Saturday, but will return to this country within the next few weeks. While Illinois land is much more productive than the land in Southeast Missouri, the Ozarks cannot be excelled for health and for the grandeur of their scenery, which is gradually becoming important to those who are on the lookout for homes.
